

Last Updated: 11/5/2009 3:52 PM MWL

The BASD home page uses Microsoft Active-X add-ons to display some content. If you need an Active-X add-on, the page will display a banner at the top with the following alert:

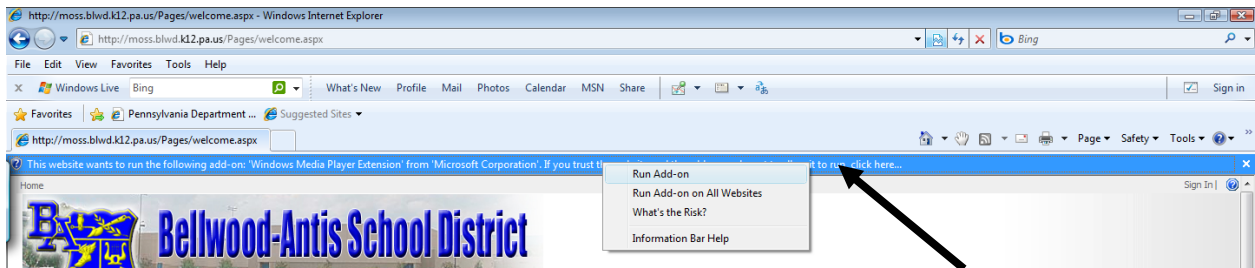

This website wants to run the following add-on "Add-on name" from Microsoft Corporation. If you trust the website and the add-on and want to allow it to run, click here...

If you have audio enabled, a faint warning tone will sound with the alert banner.

The alert banner and the missing content are identified in the illustration above. Missing content is usually identified as a small red x on the page.

By clicking on the alert banner, it will change color and provide a list of actions.

Last Updated: 11/5/2009 3:52 PM MWL

Choose the action "Run Add-on".

The following dialog box should now be displayed. Click the "Run" button. Your display should refresh. The red x will now be replaced with the missing content.

The illustration below shows the previously missing content and the alert banner is now gone. The banner should only show once unless the type of content requires multiple Active-X components.

